Stock Market Trading Falls
Off and the List Shows
Greater Stability.

PRESSURE IS RESISTED

A favorable indication of stock market stability after the heavy liquidation and decline this month was furnished yesterday by the contraction of business. The reduced volume of dealings suggested that the disappearance of selling pressure after Monday night has marked the restoration of the list to a state of comparative equilibrium in the environment of disturbing influences with which it has been lately surrounded. The action of stocks themselves was a deterrent to the renewal or persistence of speculative attack intended to force further liquidation.

There were in the morning intervals of selling activity, but prices offered a good deal of resistance, although there was at no time during the day a display of aggressive strength general or particular. Some issues were relatively heavy, but the market as a whole was simply somewhat irregular, with changes in quoted values owing largely to the trading operations of the professional contingent. Wall Street opinion inclined more distinctly toward the view that the market had about struck an approximate equilibrium, and that factors in the current price level and the future course might be able to make an improving response to the constructive conditions which exist in trade and industry and the money market, conditions which cannot be very definitely affected by any outcome of the Mexican crisis. It seemed to be wait on Mexican occurrences, especially with the holiday interruptions which are immediately ahead.

Government bonds displayed increased interest, and the war tax, though still special, did not affect the Mexican account, but the fundamental situation of the securities market and the basic circumstances of the money market do not permit any depressing influence to be drawn from the outlook for new issues of public bonds, or from foreign sources. The French loan, which has been long under negotiation, seems to be nearing a conclusion, and other foreign borrowings here are in process of arrangement.

It will be no very heavy task to account for the extra requirements of our own Government because of Mexico, and attention hardly needs to be directed to the fact that funds will be provided in this way only for expenditure in the purchase of the products of our industries, thus maintaining the country's industrial and domestic commerce which has reached such a stage of profitable expansion.

Reports in circulation yesterday indicated a good deal of activity at Washington in the direction of contracts for military materials and supplies. Admittedly, steel and iron are still in increased foreign inquiry for munition steels on the theory that our own needs might affect our manufacturing ability to turn out finished munitions for export. The possibilities in respect to Mexican activities to distract notice from the structure of the European war will be vigorous extension of hard fighting on all fronts.

Much of the routine news of the day was of an encouraging tenor. An exception was the government's weekly weather report, which disclosed the unchanged backwardness of the agricultural season.

Statements of railroad earnings for May were gratifying in the last degree. Various satisfactory dividend declarations were made, and the resumption of an American zinc, together with the regular quarterly distribution of dividends on the eastern and western shares and the proposal for partial discharge of the accumulated dividends on Colorado Pewter is noted.

The weakness of marks was the feature of the foreign exchange market, presumably in reflection of the announcement in which the war is subsumed in Germany.

The importation of gold from Canada increased to about $115,500,000 by a direct shipment of more than $6,000,000 to Philadelphia. It is plain that the inflow of capital from Canada augurs well for further foreign financing here, and especially plain that it is strengthening materially the already strong position of our banking system.
